NO, THIS DISPLAY WINDOW WASN'T HIT BY A TORNADO, BUT PASSERS-BY GESTURING WILDLY CAN CERTAINLY STIR UP A STORM.

Diesel Interactive Window

BY LIGANOVA

The first of its kind: an interactive window display created by Diesel in collaboration with brand and retail marketing specialist Liganova. An absolute innovation in the German market, the display is set to appear in five Diesel flagship stores throughout the country. 'Technologies were brought together innovatively, and completely new effects were created,' says Indra Rahn, head of communications for Liganova. Unlike interactive touch-sensor windows, this invention features 'motion tracking' technology – based on the use of a video camera – that allows customers standing in front of the store to influence objects and actions on the other side of the glass by moving arms and hands. Passers-by can even control the weather by invoking thunder storms, rain and wind within the window display. 'With this method,' says Rahn, 'Diesel aims to connect with a younger target group and thereby achieve a stronger brand loyalty.'
